Bond Drive Passes Six Million Mark

Not only did Arlington more than double its overall quota of $3,100,000 for the 6th War Loan, but it also oversubscribed its Series E Bonds quota, the final report on the drive, issued this week by the State headquarters of the War Finance Committee, shows.

Final figures show that total sales in Arlington were $6,221,000—the largest amount ever raised here in a War Bond campaign. Series E sales amounted to $300,000, with $270,000 as the Arlington goal.

Arthur J. Mansfield and Harrie H. Damm, co-chairmen of the drive, and Mrs. Arthur J. Mansfield, chairman of the Women's Division, this week extended their sincere thanks to all those who in any way helped to boost Arlington's total sales to the extraordinary sum of $6,221,000. Such a showing would have been impossible without the loyal and enthusiastic response of hundreds of citizens, both men, women and children.

Final State-wide figures released Saturday show that Massachusetts sales totaled $1,020,661,000, or 144 percent of its quota for an all-time high record. Sales of Series E Bonds to individuals amounted to 106 percent of the Bay State quota.

In dollar sales to individuals, Massachusetts did better than in the 5th War Loan, while the country as a whole did seven per cent less. Similarly, in overall sales to individuals and corporations, Massachusetts did ten per cent better than in the Fifth against a five per cent improvement for the nation.

In extending his congratulations to all who participated in the drive, F. W. Denio, state chairman, said: "This is a result in which everyone in Massachusetts who bought or sold a bond has had a share. Every person and organization participating is entitled to share with the Treasury itself, in some measure of satisfaction in a war engagement that has been won."

"We will not be misled into any thought that our job is over. This success will encourage us to persist in our job of meeting the monthly quotas of sales between the big drives, and will give us confidence to tackle the Seventh War Loan when it comes."

Warning against centralization of power, "log-rolling and bureaucracy," Philip G. Bowker, associate commissioner of the Metropolitan District Commission, in a talk before the Arlington Chamber of Commerce last Tuesday evening, predicted that the proposed federation of some 60 communities in Greater Boston, as outlined in the winning plans submitted in the recent "Boston Contest," will meet overwhelming opposition if and when submitted to the State Legislature.

Mr. Bowker was principal speaker at the first 1945 meeting of the Chamber—one of the most successful ever held—at the Winchester Country club. More than 100 members and guests enjoyed dinner, followed by a meeting during which Earl A. Ryder, program chairman, kept things moving at an interesting pace.

Seated at the head table were Robert E. Kneupper, president of the Chamber, and Mrs. Kneupper; Messrs. Ryder and Bowker, Col. Sarkis M. Zartarian, USA, recently returned from Italy; and Radar specialist, Philip Byrne, survivor of the USS Princeton, both of whom contributed interesting talks; and Mrs. Anna B. Chester, secretary.

Others introduced included State Senator Harris S. Richardson, Rep. Hollis M. Gott, former Town Treasurer Charles A. Hardy, Town Clerks Arthur Shinnors of Brookline and George Wellman of Watertown, Frank Randall, former manager of the Edison Company in Arlington; Mr. and Mrs. John B. Byrne who were celebrating their 34th wedding anniversary; James O. Holt, Arthur Birch, who was celebrating his birthday; Town Counsel Russell T. Hamlet, Police Chief Archie F. Bullock, James J. Golden, Jr., secretary to the selectmen; Mallam T. Ring, chairman of the Town finance committee; and three new members, William Patterson, Jesse Hutchinson and Al Janochian.

During a brief business meeting, the by-laws were amended, changing annual dues to $5 for business members and $3 for civic members. Resolutions on the death of three prominent members, the late Cyrus Dallin, Charles M. Sawyer and John A. Bishop, were read by Wathan B. Henderson, Representative Gott and Norman Jenkinson, respectively, after which those present stood in silent tribute.

MASSACHUSETTS OPA BOARDS MARK THIRD ANNIVERSARY

Massachusetts War Price and Rationing Boards mark their third anniversary in January.

From its inception as a tire rationing board after Pearl Harbor, the Arlington War Price and Rationing Board has grown to a unit that handles the rationing of gasoline, fuel oil, passenger cars, food and shoes. The Price Panel looks after retail prices in stores, service establishments and restaurants.

The history of the local board begins one week after Pearl Harbor, when it became evident that the Japs had cut off all major sources of rubber. OPA stopped the sale of tires to civilians and wired the Governors of each state to set up local boards to handle a rationing program.

Gov. Saltonstall wired all Massachusetts mayors and selectmen to appoint three-man boards in their respective cities and towns. On Jan. 5, 1942, when tires again went on sale to civilians, 351 local boards in Massachusetts opened for the business of issuing rationing certificates for their purchase.

The program of War Price and Rationing Boards has expanded with the necessities of war. The war is not over and neither is the job of the boards. Locally administered price and rationing controls continue to make it possible to furnish the armed services with what they need without completely disrupting our home front economy.

In Massachusetts there are now 361 local boards and five military boards with a total membership of 3,307, assisted by 1,565 paid employees and 1,455 volunteer workers. Five hundred of the original tire panel members are still serving.

C. of C. Meeting

Zartarian, who had predicted the outbreak of war two years before it started, held the closest attention of his audience as he spoke briefly and seriously of his experiences on the battlefield. Appearing for a realization of what this war is all about, he said in part:

"I'd like to toast to victory in 1945, but unfortunately it does not come as easily as that. Men are sacrificing a lot for us. I was in the Yankee Division in the last war, but this war is tougher. The boys in this war deserve more credit because it is a fluid war, it is not static. It's a young men's war because they can take it.

"Our medical corps, too, is doing marvelous work. I was in the hospital 2½ months and saw picked specialists do remarkable work. I cannot say too much about our nurses. They are working 12 hours a day and are doing much to comfort our men. The President's plea for more nurses should be heeded."

Returning on a hospital ship, aboard which were German-wounded men as well, Col. Zartarian said these men were given the best of care and expressed hope that the Germans are aware of this. Speaking of the morale of American soldiers, Col. Zartarian pointed out that those most seriously wounded provide the greatest laughs for their buddies. Their morale is amazing, he added. In conclusion, he said, "Our men love America more than ever. They want to get this war over as quickly as possible and want to come back home to stay. Give them your best."

Describes Sea Epic

Seaman Byrne, modestly answering questions put to him by Chairman Ryder, brought out that he was in the water a half hour during which he "said plenty of prayers," after the aircraft carrier Princeton went down. The carrier's magazine blew up and there was a rush to get off, after which destroyers pulled alongside to rescue the crew. Only 100 of the 1500 in the crew were lost. Everybody aboard kept his head, he said. The Arlington young man had been on the Princeton ever since it was commissioned. It was in charge of a Winchester naval officer. Byrne praised the treatment received from officers aboard the carrier.

Bowker Hits Plans

Literally tearing apart the three plans submitted in the Boston contest sponsored jointly by Gov. Saltonstall, Mayor Tobin, Boston Society of Architects, Boston Chamber of Commerce, Harvard University, Boston University and M.I.T., for purposes of centralizing controls over metropolitan services, Commissioner Bowker in his talk rushed to get off, after which destroyers pulled alongside to rescue the crew. Only 100 of the 1500 in the crew were lost. Everybody aboard kept his head, he said. The Arlington young man had been on the Princeton ever since it was commissioned. It was in charge of a Winchester naval officer. Byrne praised the treatment received from officers aboard the carrier.

He said in part: "We already have an administrative group, the M.D.C., for certain services over a wide area. The first prize winning plan calls for a municipal assembly, to replace the M.D.C., which would elect a manager at a salary of $25,000 a year. It would take over administration of fire and police departments and even some of the assessing. The main idea is centralization. For years, in Brookline we have fought an election to Boston. This may be a plan towards that end. Beware of fancy names.

"One thing overlooked in these plans are the merits of decentralization. The problems of the Port of Boston, rapid transit, water supply, etc., can be settled without setting up a state within a state."

Hitting the proposal to revalue property in the federation of communities, as advanced in Plan Two, Bowker warned that a lack of knowledge of local problems on the part of outside assessors would prove unsatisfactory.

"The transit problem and the Port of Boston problem should be tackled by the people of Boston for the city of Boston," Bowker stressed. "Unless Boston puts its own house in order we are not going to give Boston much sympathy. I don't think Arlington, Brookline or Newton will hop into this plan quickly. Plans look fine on paper but study them carefully. Let Boston itself put its own brains to work."

The Metropolitan District Commission, he explained, tries to follow legislation passed by representatives, who are elected by the people themselves. "If we on the M.D.C. behave badly, we can easily be removed," he concluded.

During the evening, Chairman Ryder introduced the Chamber's "Program for 1945", in which both serious and humorous recommendations were made. He also quoted from passages spoken by James O. Holt, Parker Wood, Walter T. Chamberlain and Arthur Birch at a mock town meeting ten years ago.

The meeting closed with a prayer for those in the armed forces.

Dave Crafts followed this up with Newton's second score, in 23 seconds. Two minutes later, Recco soloed for the third point.

MASTER of a thousand craft!

Ever stop to think of how much the mechanic who repairs your car has to know? There are hundreds of things that can get out of order in any piece of mobile machinery. Your automobile is no exception. Yet your mechanic—I call him the Doctor of Motors—usually lays his finger on the trouble and fast too.

We've been supplying the Doctor of Motors precision-made repair parts for 17 years. I know he knows his business. You can depend on him for good work and fair prices.

You'll find a Doctor of Motors in every first-class automobile repair shop in and around Arlington. Nearly all cars these days need what the Doctor of Motors can give them to keep rolling. Better have a "constitutional check up" made on your car—just to be on the safe side.

Let's keep our sights on the main target

Our fighting men always attempt to "Do First Things First." In their book the "first thing" of all is victory over the Germans and the Japs. For three full years, their sights have been trained unwaveringly on their objective, Total Victory. They recognized fully the strength of the enemy and realized that only complete concentration could bring about the defeat of desperate and fanatical foes.

The phenomenal and successive victories of our armed forces are a great tribute to their ability to concentrate on their objectives. Unfortunately, these successes have given the civilian population in recent months the idea that we "were in", and, as a result, there has been a very noticeable diminution in the war effort here at home.

Recent set-backs suffered by our armed forces should serve to emphasize that the hardest part of the roads to Berlin and Tokio is still ahead. Our fighting men know this. Their sights are unflinchingly and determinedly trained on their objective, Total Victory.

Let all of us at home, until our enemies have been defeated on all fronts, keep our sights on the main target, Total Victory.

NOW IT'S TELEPHONES

Telephones have now joined the ranks of the "necessities" which the government should make available to all people, according to proponents of a bill which has been introduced in Congress to set up a "Rural Telephone Administration" with a preliminary appropriation of $100,000,000. Under it, loans could be made to individuals, corporations, state agencies, municipalities, and cooperatives, as well as the Rural Electrification Administration, for the purpose of financing the construction, acquisition, extension or modernization of existing telephone companies, as well as to provide for the creation, when necessary, of new organizations.

As usual, the introduction of this latest proposed venture into business by government was preceded by a lengthy account of the failure of the private telephone industry to adequately serve rural areas now reached by thousands of independent companies. It was not pointed out that the United States leads the world in percentage of farms with telephone service, not to mention city service.

The question for the people to decide is where they want the government to stop its socialization program. If the government is to operate power companies and telephone companies at the taxpayers' expense, on the ground that everyone has a divine right to telephones and electric lights, what next?

NEW YEAR RESOLUTION

New Year's Day is a traditional time for the making of intimate, personal resolutions. There is one resolution, however, we ought to make, not as isolated individuals, but as members of the great society of men: to be better neighbors.

The world must devote its thoughts and energies to a better post-war order, in which peace will be synonymous with justice and good will and with equal opportunity for all, irrespective of race, color, or creed. This means an all-out dedication to tasks that must begin in homes, schools, churches—in all places where the impact of new social ideas and new social responsibilities can produce the best results.

The world's problem goes deep into the realms of religion, psychology—and plain common sense. It will be solved only when neighbors in cities, towns, and villages become neighbors in truth; when Protestant, Catholic, and Jew are equally honored and respected; when white, yellow, and black men cease to be color-conscious; when, in short, each of us resolves to act as befits the children of a common Father.

Some of us may have to make a determined, conscious effort to live up to such a resolve. But would we confess that, spiritually, our backs are weak? Would we confess that our democratic pretensions are just that—pretensions? Would we, in face of the world's crying need, close our hearts to justice, charity, and good faith?

For the sake of those who fight our battles today, of those who still suffer under the totalitarian tyranny, for the salvation of the world, we hope that few will evade the challenge to re-order their lives in closer harmony with those of mankind in general.—From Religious News Service.

The NEWS OBSERVES

Recruitment of student nurses is an important part of the war activity at the present time. The next class for the Cambridge Hospital School of Nursing will enter during the first week in April. There are many vacancies in this class. Entrance requirements include high school graduation with at least two years of science. Qualified and interested young women are urged to make application at the hospital.

"All men who are interested in Radar training should take advantage of the Navy's offer to provide them with information on suggested study prior to taking the Eddy Aptitude Test," Lt. Com. H. E. Milliken announced yesterday. No technical experience is required. All who pass the Eddy Aptitude Test will be eligible for a specialized training valued at $5,000. Both volunteers and producers who desire 10 months' training in the amazing new science of Radar are advised to either write or visit the Boston Navy Recruiting Station in the Post Office Building, for full information.

Someone this week discovered a new—although illegal way—of overcoming the meat shortage. Roderick McAtchey of 843 Massachusetts Ave., reported to the police that several of his pigeons had been stolen.

Boys have found a new sport—but it's a dangerous one. According to a complaint filed with local police, a group of youngsters has been "hopping" inbound Boston & Maine trains as they pass the Brattle St. station in the morning.

Betty Bayburn's Column

STARTING OUT on a new year is like putting on a new pair of shoes. You know you are going somewhere. You don't know where or when, but it's going to be exciting to find out.

Bayburn has just finished its busiest two years since 1916. We've cleaned tons and tons of army uniforms and equipment that has gone into every battle area. Maybe you have seen that giant trailer that we've kept busy between Arlington and Camp Edwards, sometimes making three trips in a single 24 hours period. During those weeks when army orders were so heavy, many a civilian customer waited and waited and waited. We surely found our customers to be jolly good sports and patient even when we couldn't tell them ALL the reasons why their orders had to be delayed.

OUR STAFF HAS WORKED long and hard these last two years. Some of us have been here at the same old stand for twenty long years. It seems a bit amusing to tell the youngsters we can really remember when Roosevelt was Secretary of the Navy and that there was once a President named Harding.

There are times when we like to shout from the housetops how proud we are to be in the dry cleaning industry. Do you realize that good professional cleaning protects the health of yourself and your family while "winter colds" are going the rounds? For 29 years we have guaranteed "IF IT'S CLEANED AT BAYBURN, IT'S sterilized." It's so important with children's things. It's because dry cleaning is so effective in ridding clothes of contagious germs that, in this war, the Army is sending mobile units to every front to keep uniforms "safe" to wear.

Incidentally, we always print "Bayburn" on our cloth identification tag as our sort of trade-mark. We try to do "good cleaning" and we want to sign our name to all our work in this manner.

Some customers don't realize that there is a limit to the wonders a cleaner can perform. If they did, they would buy things more carefully.

For instance, check your dress belts for serviceability. Are they stuck together with soluble glues? Do they have imitation suede, leatherette, or paper backing? Are they cemented together with black adhesive that stains through the fabric from the inside? Are they interlined with improperly dyed black crinoline that stains dark streaks on the fabric?

Most of these belts cannot be satisfactorily cleaned by any process, and so they are on the list of articles which the War Manpower Commission says should not be accepted for cleaning.

Buy carefully. It isn't right for good dresses to have such trashy trimming.

1945 IS UPON US. May it be God's will that soon the dark clouds will disappear and we will welcome the dawn of Peace and Good Will throughout the world.

Yours for cleaner living.

ARLINGTON READY TO COPE WITH ROBOT BOMB ATTACK

Announcement early this week by a high ranking Naval officer that the use of robot bombs against large cities on the eastern coast within the next 30 or 60 days appeared not only possible but probable, brought to light the fact that the Arlington Civilian Defense had been alerted to such a possibility more than a month ago.

Hollis M. Gott, chairman of the Arlington Committee on Public Safety this week released a copy of an order sent out last Nov. 27 by J. W. Farley, executive director of the State committee, to all regional directors, chief air raid wardens and city and town chairmen.

Meanwhile an air of confidence prevails at headquarters of local protective agencies and at the Arlington Civilian Defense report center. No concern was expressed over the Navy announcement, the feeling being that Arlington's Civilian Defense is already well organized and that while the possibility of a buzz bomb attack on this coast is remote, Arlington is prepared to cope with whatever comes its way. It is conceded that there are no objectives of great military value in Arlington, but that, while this town may not be a deliberate target, there is a remote chance that some robot bombs might land in this vicinity.

Director Farley's message to the Arlington Civilian Defense committee gives definite instructions as to what will be done in the event of a buzz bomb attack.

His message follows: "There has recently been considerable publicity about the possible use of rocket bombs against cities on the Atlantic Coast. An Army-Navy statement that such attacks were theoretically possible stimulated public interest.

"Admitting this possibility, in our judgment the probability of such an attack is small and is daily becoming less. Moreover, should such an occurrence take place, it would probably involve only scattered incidents which could be handled by the regular police, fire and other municipal services.

"Nevertheless, a situation might arise, assuming such an attack, which would require the use of Civilian Defense ambulances, rescue squads, auxiliary police, auxiliary firemen, and some of the other A. R. P. services. Besides, if one rocket fell in any locality, this would indicate the possibility of more, and the public might, unless the situation was promptly dealt with, become seriously disturbed.

"For these reasons, the A. R. P. organization, as a whole, should be prepared to mobilize if conditions develop that make this seem advisable.

"So that we may be prepared to meet the situation assumed, the procedure outlined below will be followed:

- 1) In the event of a verified rocket attack, warning will be given to all communities by telephone over the present communications system.
- 2) State Headquarters, all Regional Headquarters and all Warning Centers will be flanned promptly by a skeleton organization.
- 3) Such report centers as are deemed affected or likely to be affected, will also be activated and manned upon orders from the respective Controllers.
- 4) The Public Alarm System should NOT be used to mobilize Civilian Defense personnel unless specific circumstances in any given community warrant such action in the opinion of the Local Chairman or Chief Air Raid Warden.
- 5) State Headquarters must be advised promptly, through regular channels, of any rocket bomb incidents, and also of the measures taken within the community to cope with the situation.
- 6) Local Chairmen and Chief Air Raid Wardens should NOW survey their organization with regard to the current availability of rescue squads, ambulances and first aid parties.

Meanwhile, the Navy has expressed assurance that everything possible has already been done to prevent enemy submarines or surface craft from approaching our shores near enough to be able to launch rocket bombs.

Veterans' Readjustment Vital Postwar Problem, Masons Told

Out of this war will come a World War II organization that will demand a "pretty good mode of living," John D. West told about 200 members of Russell Lodge, A. F. & A. M., at a banquet in the Masonic Temple on Wednesday evening.

Referring to postwar problems, Mr. West pointed out that when veterans come back home they will be entertained but, unfortunately, interest in these men will wane. They will not be satisfied to go back to their old jobs; they will be restless; everything they have been doing has been entirely different from their usual way of life. They will appreciate what is done for them but for some time they will not be satisfied, Mr. West warned. He suggested that serious thought and planning be given to the proper readjustment of returning veterans so that they may find happiness and contentment at home.

Turning to economic problems, the speaker said that the United States has shown in this war that production is no problem, but that the problem is distribution of products through the economic setup that we have. He proposed modernizing all machinery and junking the old; furthermore, that 10 billion dollars' worth of this be given to the Ethiopians so they can raise their standard of living. "Now is the time to straighten out production and distribution problems," he added.

He told his audience not to be surprised to see the United States, England and Russia sit down together after the war and decide just what country will produce certain products, so that the problem of distribution can be eventually straightened out.

The present national debt, he stated, amounts to two years' total earnings of the average family in the United States, based on an average annual income of $3,800.

Concluding, Mr. West said, "Take each day and do your part as your part is given."

"That's the way to happiness, that's the way to heaven."

Mr. West spoke in the absence of Eliot S. Boardman of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston who was unable to attend. A business meeting followed the dinner.
